Sponsored by JPMORGAN CHASE

Stitches Technology Workforce Advisory Services Initiative, helps connect displaced, experienced apparel workers to permanent jobs in other apparel and sewn products companies.

The Stitches Workforce Advisory Services has grown organically from the needs of over 200 skilled workers who had been laid off. These workers had been employed an average of 10 years, many of whom are monolingual, speaking one of several foreign languages. SWA is the answer to many of these challenges.

The Stitches Workforce Advisory Services is a project of Stitches Technology Business & Career Centers, Inc. which was founded in 1998 by Clotee McAfee, a 30-year veteran of the Fashion and Apparel Industry. The organization provides comprehensive training and job placement for young adults between the ages of 18 and 26, giving them the technical and life skills needed to succeed in entry-level positions in the broadly versatile sewn products industry.
